

220 AD

Revolts bring down the Han Dynasty in China

Still with the crossbow had extended the dynasty's control Caravans along the Silk Road had traded to the eastern edges of the known world.
The attempt to relieve pressure on the frontier by bringing tribes within the Great Wall and using them for defense, combined with the oppression of the peasantry by the landlords and the mandarin bean bureaucracy, led to a series of internal disorders, these destroyed the Han Dynasty and left China with no central authority for 350 yrs.

Elagabalus married the Vestal
Virgin Julia Aquilia Severa

C220

Goltes invade Asia Minor

Council of Carthage

The first of these Councils of Bishops in Carthage in North Africa was held in 220.

AD 220

The Chinese empire broke up.

C 220

Erez Israel

Jew-Hat

d. of Judah ha-Nasi

220A1)

Goths invade Asia Minor and Balkan Peninsula

220 AD

End of Han Dynasty in China followed by 4 centuries of division